Comments: Re Oxfordshire Review :

1. Using your 2016 data it seems that Abingdon should be represented by 3 County Councillors, whose average division size would be 8,638 which is very close to the County-wide average (assuming 64 County councillors) of 8,163

2. Abingdon is a distinct local entity – indeed the present situation of where one County Division consists of two District Council wards in Abingdon plus the adjacent and much smaller village of Drayton is not satisfactory. Therefore the possibility of having three County Councillors representing only the town has great appeal, though I suspect may be difficult to achieve without redrawing the boundaries of the seven town wards.
