I have gone onto the web site to view the suggested boundary changes. However it appears that Surrey Heath have singularly omitted to provide an electronic version.

I would like to make one point:

Surrey Heath consists of one large sprawling town namely Camberley as well as several villages. The rest of the area consists of army land and Chobham Common. Because of the green belt these villages are sparsely populated.

I would suggest that when considering the boundaries land mass should be part of the equation, otherwise every time there is a boundary review these villages could be shunted from one local authority to another.

Yours sincerely,
Wendy Bentall
