At the last local election I was concerned about the lack of information given to us to make an informed decision on who to vote for. Stephen Murray was the only councillor at the voting station and when I asked why there was no information or other councillors, I was told that no other candidates bother canvassing because he always wins and has done for 40 years. I find this very undemocratic and think everyone in the election campaign should have a legal obligation to publish policies and advertise them in an effective way so the local electorate are aware of each candidates policies and can make a democratic & informed choice.
