Having lived in Twyford since 1980, it does not make sense to me why Ruscombe should be brigaded with Wargrave and Remenham, when it is geographically next to and part of Twyford. Wargrave is a separate village one mile north of Twyford, and Remenham is over four miles away in the same direction, just outside Henley on Thames. Treating Twyford and Ruscombe separately politically at the most local level can only cause confusion and division amongst local people. It also has consequences when online searches are conducted by, eg estate agents or developers, leading to the conclusion that the two areas are distinct from one another, which they are clearly not. I would therefore hope that in future Twyford and Ruscombe become a single ward, reflecting the unified nature of the two adjacent areas.
