I believe the current proposals for a single member Chiltern Ridges Ward, after careful consideration, is unworkable. The better solution would be to split the Ward up and align its parishes with the nearest parts of Chesham. Most of the Ward should go into Chesham North including the parishes of Ashley Green, Cholesbury, St Leonard's, Bellingdon, The Lee and Chartridge. They all share public services with Chesham and are all on radial roads into the town. The parishes of Latimer and Ley Hill would then go onto Chesham South. Chenies would be added to Little Chalfont and Chalfont St Giles as it has a small population and fits better in that Ward. The 3 new wards would then have a balanced number of voters.
