After a total collapse of trust in all politicians, both national and local (and the fact that this is the 2nd time I have typed this, the first time it just 'disappeared') plus a monumental increase in unavoidable cost of living expenses like council tax and electricity, I am not minded to agree any change at all. I would also like to note that there has been nothing explaining this desire for change, all I have seen is the comment, above, that "we are minded there should be 48 councillors" - why? why are you so minded? how many are there currently? is this up or down? etc etc etc
