Why do you need to change anything? You do not seem to be proposing increasing or cutting the number of councillors so I'm unclear on what outcome you are expecting from firstly asking the question and then going on to try and carry out any recommended changes. My only recommendation would be to increase the number of councillors and to ensure their political allegiances are evenly spread (basically not all Labour and Tories, thanks!). Councillors should be the link between the residents of a ward and the Council but unfortunately I find they try to focus all discussions through their political lense. When it comes to where I live, I couldn't care less about who you vote for. If you're just re-drawing some lines on a map then it doesn't really matter. It's just another way of dividing communities.
