Changes to the wards need to be carefully managed to avoid political parties having dominance in particular wards. Currently the labour party could put a donkey with a red rosette in certain wards and they would win. However shrinking the wards or changing boundaries would not improve the quality of councillors. A concern I have hugely is that shrinking the wards means disabled councillors will less likely standing silencing our voice. I urge the commission not to accept any ward which has one councillor in as disabled candidates are less likely to consider the ward if there is not at one other councillor to support them.
