I live on Debden estate and we currently are a part of Loughton Broadway. I am slightly confused/bemused as to why this ward is being removed and replaced with others? For me, the Broadway has a great historic significance and identity and it feels like this is being totally wiped out and I can't help but wonder why and also feel aggrieved about this. For example, would it not be better to replace it with Loughton Debden or something similar? It feels like the identity and place of Debden is being wiped off the map and this feels dishonouring to the local community and also the history of the estate. Surely it makes sense for ward boundaries to follow historic geographic territories and identities?
