Perhaps these new wards make sense by equivalent number of residents, but some are less logical in terms of connections and common concerns. Westdene either belongs with Withdean, or has more in common in terms of local issues, transport and schools with Patcham and Hollingbury. I can't see how it relates to Hove Park at all, or the uber-Tory residents along Dyke Road and Woodland Avenue. Other proposals, such as a dedicated Kemptown & Marina are long overdue, for areas with a strong historic identity that has been long overshadowed by being shackled to a neighbouring region that had a contrary demographic.
