Comment text:

The proposal to split the Patcham ward along the boundaries thus proposed makes little sense. I have lived in Patcham and Hollingbury for 35 years and actually wrote my PhD thesis, [REDACTED] [REDACTED] on the development of interwar Patcham suburban housing [REDACTED] [REDACTED]; so it is an area that I know well. As lines on a map [REDACTED] they may have some semblance of order...but in the actual field they have no relevance and divide what is now a discrete and cohesive community. In particular the grouping of the Ladies Mile Estate[LME] with Hollingbury, thus parting the former from the old village core seems a bizarre choice and one that LME residents will have scant respect for! especially as Vale Avenue and Highview are now separated from their historic 'family' of Ferguson estate streets; these latter two were intended as the smart 'West End' of the LME. These proposals need a more rigorous scrutiny before they are acted upon as there are many other anomalies that need clarification and revision.
