I would like to record that it is my belief that the Patcham Ward boundaries should remain as they are. The current boundaries retain the economic and social nature of Patcham as a village community providing schooling for the nursery, infant, junior and secondary education of its children without having to cross the very busy Carden Avenue. The Patcham Community Centre is a valuable and well used leisure resource for all ages in Patcham that does not require travelling into Brighton or crossing Carden Avenue and enhances its nature as a Village. When it was proposed to redraw the Brighton Pavilion parliamentary constituency boundary both residents and the Council lobbied hard for regard to be had to the traditional social and economic links, and the Commission accepted this argument. With future proposed development in the Hollingbury area the aim of a similar size population in both Wards is unlikely to be the future result and following this argument through would lead to the need for another review.
