I live in Great Comberton and feel that our village has much stronger connections with Little Comberton and Elmley Castle than with Eckington. One of the advantages of keeping the Combertons, Elmley Castle and the other Bredon Hill villages in the same district ward is that they share many of the same issues, be they planning, housing, community, social, access to public transport or schooling. There is less commonality of interests with the larger settlements such as Eckington, or even further afield Fladbury. I also think it less likely that our voice would be heard if it were to differ from the interests of these much larger places.
