The proposals seem to more evenly distribute the constituency size for each elected member which seems a fairer distribution of workload. I assume though that thie proposals will reduce the number of elected members without reducing the amount of work that the council will expect them to do. There will be more work per councillor eg same number of planning committee meetings but fewer councillors available to take on these roles. More work for fewer volunteers (elected members) would seem to make the already difficult challenge of getting people to stand for election even more challenging.
