I think we should go ahead and have equal amounts of Councillors per population within their area. However, I also believe size of area should be a factor and so a good balance between these two issues as a densely populated area may have more issues than a sparsely populated area. I'm not sure how the population density changes throughout wards, but I believe this will be better. I also believe having 3 councillors in an area which has historically not had many issues and having 3 in an area with many issues isn't fair. Please use your expertise and knowledge to ensure all issues raised can be dealt with.
