Dear Sirs

I have recently looked carefully at the proposals to amend the boundary of Thames Ditton and Weston Green in the redesign of Surrey divisions.

I believe that the proposals do not provide more equality of representation as the new county council divisions do not meet the criteria of similar sized divisions - indeed it would seem to push the size from just below to well below average number of constituents; the identity and interests of the communities are not better served where natural barriers are replaced with artificial lines drawn on the map and this will not improve the currently effective local government. Thames Ditton and Weston Green have been inextricably linked for far longer than most communities and work well together and there is no evidence that the two areas will be improved by being forced in to artificial relationships with bordering areas.

I trust that the Boundary Commission will see sense and preserve a perfectly good area as it is not broken and does not need fixing.

Yours faithfully
