It is ludicrous that the Council is looking to increase its size given the budget directly under its control and the cost of democracy that this involves. My preference would be for a Hertfordshire Unitary Council (or two if one would be too large). Alternatively, the Council should be looking to reduce its numbers to 35/40 with an average population of around 3000. I served as a local councillor in the District for 15 years and had no problem dealing with the case load involved as well as serving on the Cabinet and various committees.
