Although long established the current Riverside ward is the geographical anomaly across the whole council area. It covers a number of very different communities, with many not naturally connected in anyway. It stretches from North Shields town centre in the east to areas of Wallsend in the west such as Willington Quay and Rosehill. I would suggest the A19 be the natural boundary across the whole borough and no council ward should cross this. Only Riverside ward currently covers communities either side of the A19. The town centre area of North Shields is currently split across four different wards (Riverside, Chirton, Preston and Tynemouth). A North Shields ward existed prior to 2004 and I think it would be sensible to look at reintroducing this again with the entire town centre all represented by the same councillors instead of the fractured situation that currently exists.
