Dear Sir, Myself and my wife moved to Aldock, Road, Old Town Stevenage during the pandemic to start a family. So far we have found it easy to become part of the local community, eg shop locally in the Old Town, use local trades persons work work required on the house, socialise, etc. We now really feel part of the local Old Town community. So it came as a great surprise to find out that there is a proposal to divide this community, as you can see from the draft, the old boarder for the Old Town goes right the way down Grace Way, with the new border it zig zags at random behind the houses on Weston Road. I really find it hard to understand how this can be possible, how can most of what is currently Old Town suddenly become Pin Green. For instance our house and many, many others around it were build before the new towns act in 1946. When this comes to pass, my local ward elected councilperson will be for Pin Green and will have zero say over any of the local facilities I use. It just does not make any sense. Yours faithfully [REDACTED]
