Comment text:

I think the request is starting from the wrong place. Having decided on wanting 40 cllrs already has adopted a traditional approach to how local governments engage with communities. We think we know best and we'll get a few active local folk to rubber stamp it. A locally codesigned and coproduced cllr system would be far better and more ambitious. We need a system change, brave and aspirational model, not just calve a few clrrs off the list. As you can see, this is very off the cuff remarks and something Ive squeezed into doing during my lunch break, but fundamentally, do not feel these proposals are ambitious enough, nor broad enough, to cover what people actually want and need from their elected reps.
