I can see no logic in separating Lulsley from Alfrick, and also taking Knightwick which has traditionally been linked to Suckley. The present boundary of the River Teme and the A44 seems to be a better and more physical northern boundary to the revised Alfrick and Leigh plans. The GP surgery that serves Alfrick is in Knightwick and so it would seem sensible for it to stay with Alfrick. There does not appear to be a need for these small relatively unpopulated areas to be linked to the northerly area of Martley. On the eastern edge of the area, again it would be preferable for rural Bransford to stay with Leigh, where it has traditionally been linked for centuries, rather than to include it with northerly Rushwick, etc. Again the River Teme would be a good northern physical boundary.
