It was surprise to learn that Bucks has around 147 councillors with a proposal to reduce to 120 after unification. More staff are need for transition period so that makes sense to reduce the number. However from a quick read of government website, there needs to be two types of councillor - one to keep the services running and maintain community links and a second group with a more strategic focus. If all are focused on the here and now we are not going to be able to achieve some of the more strategy changes eg climate change, housing, waste etc. I don't feel qualified to state a number but would like to see councillors working together to support the community now and consulting /planning for changes needed to support the future of our communities. Perhaps now is the time to break conventional/traditional ways of working or alignment of councillors with services. Thanks
