

I fall in to Rottindean Coastal because of the odd dog leg that has been drawn, I'm assuming the logic is that you've made a boundary from the start of Roedean road. But the area that I am referring to is the cottages that were built for the firestation and are opposite East Brighton park. It makes far more coherent sense that my enclave is part of East Brighton - the property stock and location has more in common with East Brighton than it does with any of Rottingdean Coastal. It seems to me any how.
