Before I can make any useful and/or valued opinions it would be great if Gravesham Council could publish exactly what the role of a councillor is. If you want informed and constructive comments people need to understand the role. I am not a youngster, and was born and have lived in the borough for the majority of my life, but I have no idea what the current role of a local councillor is, or whether the full allowance is claimed by every councillor, and I suspect I am far from being alone in that lack of understanding. My council voting is done purely on the strength of Party, never having seen or heard from a councillor, my ward or any other. On the strength of my current understanding of the role I would feel that 39 is far too many councillors for the borough, but as each must be playing a role in some form or another it would be good to hear what it is.
