My husband and I want to stay affiliated to Yarm. Although I don't actually understand how the change to the existing boundaries will directly affect the people in Kirklevington, we still wish to stay connected to Yarm which is 20 minutes walk away - and has the same post code! We have recently voted for the local ward councillors, We therefore don't want to go through this expensive and time consuming process again, or will we be just allotted a ward councillor at random? I understand towns and villages are getting larger, but surely we just need more councillors for the same wards? How can we live in Stockton, with a Yarm post code, yet be merged with Middlesbrough? It just doesn't make sense to me!
