I think this is a great idea. The new boundaries are more representative of communities and will likely benefit those communities with higher deprivation. However, care needs to be taken to address any stigma felt by communities. The new boundaries should be maximised to create an opportunity for residents to come out and rebrand their communities the way they want them to be seen. It will better represent their need and support local services to access funding and resources which may not have been available due to deprivation thresholds not met due to more affluent neighbours affecting the ward average.
