Comment text:

Ideally it needs another name given Aintree itself is a nearby area in Sefton. Not only does this potentially cause confusion, it risks further eroding the concept of Fazakerley as a distinct place from Aintree, after the renaming of the hospital. In addition, it confuses the boundary of Aintree and Fazakerley further, meaning it is not intuitive to members of the public who do not actively engage with politics, potentially making it more confusing for people to contact their local representative. Eg if someone in Aintree (Sefton) wanted to contact their local councillor, they may mistakenly contact the Aintree Ward Councillor in Liverpool. Likewise people living in the proposed Aintree Ward may contact another Fazakerley councillor. It would be more appropriate to call this ward Fazakerley West, and the proposed Fazakerley West renamed to Fazakerley North. Also would make more sense if the boundary followed the railway, rather than randomly jumping over the line. Although understandable if not possible due to population balance.
