Comment text:

Brunswick Town existed with its own Town Hall & the building is still there. Hove was just a single road, seafront cottages and one good church at that time. Westward development because of Brunswick Town and the westward railway to Shoreham & Worthing set the trajectory leading to the Borough of Hove that swallowed Brunswick Town. Do not erase Brunswick Town which proudly knows its own identity within Hove. And we in Hove are not like Brighton even though physically spliced. Hove people have a separate culture. Culture should trump urban sprawl numbers alone where political representation is concerned
