I am a resident of the Brunswick and Adelaide ward and am strongly against merging this ward into a larger Regency ward. Brunswick and Adelaide is a quiet residential area, and has very different needs to the very touristy and loud Regency ward. The 2 areas have little in common, apart from proximity to the sea front. Even the sea front itself is very different in character in the 2 areas - the commercial Regency sea front bears no resemblance to the Brunswick and Adelaide sea front. The historic character is also completely different and there is a strong identity attached to the B&A ward. I do not see any benefit in merging the 2 wards apart from a cost saving exercise on the part of the council to the detriment of its residents.
