I'm sorry but the Mackie estate is very much part of Patcham not part of Hollingbury, and it always has been. I say this because it is directly (and only connected to Patcham via the road system), therefore residents use and have access to Patcham facilities and amenities so should have a say in our area is run, I personally have no interest in Hollingbury and what it does as anything that happens on that side of the hill is pretty much irrelevant to me for the reasons above, this seems to be an ill thought out and arbitrary choice of borders which does not take into account the people of Patcham and sense of community we have. I only live a few hundred yards from the new proposed Patcham border most of Hollingbury is too far away from me to care about, we have and always will be Patcham not Hollingbury. I do not want to vote on matters related to Hollinbury as they do not impact me in the slightest. Also having seen the poor investment in local amenities like the Mackie Park vs the much larger investment given to Hollingbury's park (which is too far away to use) I do not feel it fair to lump Mackie in with Hollingbury as the local funding pot will be even more diluted and probably will lead to even less investment than we already see in the area.
