Patcham is entirely separate from Hollingbury/Carden. The boundary runs down the middle of Carden Avenue. Westdene and Patcham are, and always have been, also separate areas. House prices in those areas generally reflect this overall and are very likely to change detrimentally if the boundaries are combined. When the development of Patcham initially began in the 1920's/30's, by a Scotsman who lived in the Whitehouse at the top of Ladies Mile Road, he gave the area an individual identity. Hence, most of the roads have Scottish names. Very special to local residents. The proposed boundary changes are absolutely unacceptable and unnecessary.
