If these changes went ahead Patcham would be split down the middle and lose council representation. Both the historic Patcham Village and our schools would find themselves left on the edges of a much larger ward in which issues facing the area would be diluted and of less importance to it's councilors. Local issues such as the recent proposals to build on the Horsdean Recreation Ground, and the ongoing campaign against the Royal Mail sorting office moving to Patcham Court Farm would lack council representation by those who have a specific knowledge, understanding and attachment to the area. This seems to be politically motivated rather than being in any way in the interest of the residents.
