Comment text:

I am concerned about the representation of Patcham residents in the current proposal. It seems to me that this move is to try and increase a Tory representation across the city which I am wholly opposed to. Would it not be better to reduce the number of councillors rather than split the ward? This would give better representation of views if the Patcham residents instead of them being diluted by the views of residents from Westdene and Hollingbury respectively. My road is proposed to be in the Carden and Hollingbury ward and I do not feel my concerns will be aligned with the residents currently in that area as the issues are largely not the same and with a bigger area the arguments around the concerns will become diluted. Please reconsider.
