I think it is most unreasonable to have one large ward for Radcliffe on Trent with three members for that ward. Radcliffe has a growing population and a single ward takes no account of the demographic difference within that population. We used to have three wards with one member elected for each ward. That is a far more equitable and democratic arrangement. I cannot see any benefit from a having one multi member ward other than making the election cheaper in some way or to enable (or rig) a situation where a single party gets to elect multiple member. I thought Rushcliffe as a council was keen to promote community participation in the council not entrench one party rule.
