I would like to oppose the new boundary definitions which will affect the village in which I live. Peopleton has a small community which has come together over many proposals which have threatened the unique fabric of the village. We were one of the first communities to forge ahead with our own flood prevention programme; there is a community village shop and many projects have been carried out due to the backing of the PCC. Logistically these projects for the benefit of all residents would become much harder should we have to share opinion and make decisions without separate representation. Sharing all these decisions with Drakes Broughton which has a completely different purpose from Peopleton would prove massively difficult. The difference between a dormitory village with a large new build community to cater for and the responsibility of the school has a very different outlook to that of Peopleton and I feel that our issues may become lost and our challenges to proposals such as I write about here may lose their precious voice.
