My only comment is to strongly agree with the proposal to reduce the number of councillors. County Durham does not need as many elected representatives as the Scottish Parliament, as now, nor I suggest does it need as many as the US Senate which is broadly in line with your proposal. My recollection is that at the time of LGR, in 2009, the 63 divisions were each represented by two councillors as an interim shadow authority and the intention was to reduce this following the new council's launch. I think this would be a more suitable number for the council going forward.
