Parish Councils are too small. Having been Chair of Slaley Parish Council I know that PCs struggle to find new councillors in rural areas. If for example, Slaley, Healey and Whitley Chapel PCs were one, you would have a lot stronger committees with talent not spread too thinly. The issues are the same for each PC, it would make the areas more cohesive, and one Parish Clerk would be needed. The joint precepts would mean the new larger PC could support more meaningful, larger projects. I also believe the County Council would pay more attention to a more skilled, knowledgeable, professional PC as currently the PC's views and opinions are frequently dismissed by NCC.
