As a Council tax payer I think we should have fewer County Councillors. In recent years Staffordshire and Stoke on Trent has abolished both the Police and Fire Authorities and appointed a PFCC. The bill for tax payers rises inexorably and if the County Council was subject to proper business accountability then the budget for Council administration would be cut and efficiencies realised. We do not need separate district and County councils which lead to huge duplication, particularly in "back office" functions. In addition, make all Councillors apolitical/independent then they would be free of the whip and able to do the right thing for the constituents they serve.
