The splitting of St John's ward into two separate wards is an excellent idea, and one that I have been suggesting locally for a while. Dines Green has never really been part of 'St John's'. It is its own community with an identity separate, but still linked to St John's. The division will allow for a stronger local ability to make changes where they are needed, rather than spreading the existing councillors to much over too large an area. The new ward map of St John's is more representative of what locals would consider St John's, as well as the community in St John's.

I wholeheartedly support this.
