I object to the proposal of LGBCE to split Oxshott into two areas. It has taken many years to establish it as an individual community, now with an active a population of about 5,000+ people.
As an area it has fought to retain it's individuality, this can be seen by its seperation by the Green Belt which virtually surrounds it. It has most of the facilities required by a local community shops, schools, Clubs, medical centre, railway station and representative community organisation.
For years we have heard succesive Governments promote the positive features of local communities, so to split one up, as this proposal recommends, to join it with two other unrelated and individual communities seems counterprotuctive to progress! Oxshott will lose its affectiveness as a complete community, especially in its efforts to protect its surrounding environment.
We sould be looking at communities not just the number of 'heads' voting. It needs to be kept as a complete entity along with other similar areas.
