The suggestion to split Oxshott into Oxshott South and North seems illogical and ill-conceived. Oxshott is a small village, and in the current proposal, Oxshott North would have only a few hundred houses in it. Why bother splitting a parish, which clearly doesn't want to be split, for the benefit of a few hundred houses? The percentages offered in the explanation need to be clarified, as it's not apparent what the proposed split is vs the one requested by residents. This seems to be a potentially contentious political decision with very limited upside and significant downside. This suggests that keeping Oxshott as one parish is the exception to the rule, and the split should be abandoned.
