I disagree with the with the proposal of the Boundary Commission to move the outlying communities of Bell Heath, Bell End and Madeley Heath (Including Gorse Green Lane) from Clent Hills to Woodvale Division. These rural communities look towards the village of Belbroughton (the clue is in the name of the settlements) rather than the curiously named 'Woodvale' Division which has the urbanised settlement of Catshill as its focal point. The area is characterised by narrow lanes and footpaths within a few minutes-walk of the Clent Hills National Trust area. Residents will use the facilities in Belbroughton (primary school, public houses, and shopping) as a first choice and then Hagley (part of Clent Hills Division) for secondary education, library facilities and additional shopping and entertainment). The proposal seems to represent little more than 'a line on a map' rather than the characteristics of this rural area.
