Comment text:

Related subject: Liden

The creation of boundaries based purely on electoral numbers does not provide for good governance. It creates confusion and uncertainty among the electorate. For example the division of Liden leaves many unsure of where the boundaries lie, whereas the previous Dorcan Ward, based on the geographical locations of Eldene and Liden meant that everyone knew their locality and their Council representative. I strongly urge that electoral areas be geographically based (because people in a geographical area have the same/similar problems or issues) rather than based on 'number-crunching' by external bodies
