Related subject: Belbroughton, Bell Heath.

For centuries, our community has been woven into the fabric of Belbroughton, a connection that spans across generations. My family's roots here are deep; we've seen three generations thrive, attend school, and build lives within this cherished area. Currently, my children are receiving their education here, with future academic plans thoughtfully aligned within this same community. Our family's healthcare needs have always been met by the local surgery in Belbroughton, a testament to the continuity and stability we've enjoyed.

We are part of a tight-knit community where every change is felt deeply. The proposed adjustment to our electoral boundaries by the Government Boundary Commission, shifting us from Clent Hills to Woodvale, threatens to sever our longstanding ties with Belbroughton. This reassignment would not only disrupt our sense of belonging but also ignore the rich historical and personal connections we have to this area.

It's troubling that we've had little to no communication about these significant changes, which stand to impact our daily lives and community identity profoundly. We discovered this information through the Worcestershire LGBCE, yet, a detailed explanation or justification for such a decision seems absent. This lack of transparency and consideration is both unreasonable and distressing, considering the deep impact it would have on our small community.

We urge for a decision that preserves our longstanding ties to Belbroughton, ensuring that our community remains united and our heritage respected.
