I am a self-employed town planning consultant and am regularly instructed to request councillors to call planning applications to planning committee by applicants and third-parties. The protocol is that one councillor would support a call-in on one side and a second councillor would do so for the other, in the interests of fairness natural justice. However, if there is only one councillor serving a Ward, and decides only to support one side, the other side's position is prejudiced. At present, there is only one Ward with a single councillor and this situation has arisen due to this anomaly. Please do not increase the number of single-councillor Wards.
