I've done a little analysis of the 2019 and 2023 election result and it seems to me that the changes made before the 2023 election have produced a very unfair result in that it was much more dependent on which ward you stood in rather than how many people voted for you. As an example, in 2023 under the 5 ward system, the Councillor who received the least number of votes 312, only actually beat 9 of the other 46 candidates. Another example is the candidate who received 736 but did not get elected actually came in 9th place out of 47.

Compare this with the 2019 results, there was only really one candidate who could have argued that if he'd been in the other ward he'd have been elected.

It has been argued that parts of town don't feel represented under the two ward practice because nobody from 'their area' is elected but again this argument is unsubstantiated because the candidates who stand often don't reside where they stand, sometimes not even in the town at all.

I believe that PR is the way forward and changing to 5 wards from 2 wards is a step further away from that not further towards it.
