I believe there was an earlier proposal to sweep Eldwick into Baildon, but the latest position seems to be to not do that and maintain the status quo as far as Baildon is concerned. Unequivocally, I support Baildon Town Council's view that this is how it should be. Please don't have second thoughts on the matter! Eldwick is completely separate from Baildon: there is a glen and moor in between. Eldwick residents do not use Baildon's services, shops and schools, and why would they? There is no public transport link between the two places. Eldwick forms part of the Bingley urban environment. Community-wise, they are completely separate, discrete areas with uninterrupted countryside in between.
