Related subject: Eldwick

Eldwick is a village on the outskirts of Bingley. It forms part of our address. Not Baildon. Baildon is over the Moor and is not somewhere we go to shop, use amenities etc. That's Bingley, a mile away and easily accessible on foot and by public transport. I may have misread the proposed plan, and I apologise I have, but it looks as though part of Eldwick will be split into the Baildon ward, literally along a street. The geography of Eldwick/Baildon/Bingley (ie the large Moor that separates Eldwick and Baildon) is surely a valid reason to NOT put any part of a village into a ward where residents do not visit Baildon (are not able to access it easily). I can see the reasons for amending existing wards, but there is surely a way of doing this without dividing a community and doing this where there isn't a bloody great hill separating parts of a ward.
