

Cumberland

Personal Details:

Name: [REDACTED]
Email: [REDACTED]
Postcode: [REDACTED]
Organisation Name: (Member of the public)

Comment text:

Related subject: Stanwix Urban

For Stanwix Urban the southern border makes sense - the River Eden is a natural landmark and walking across Eden Bridge definitely signals a change from Castle ward. The northern boundry is interesting. Although Carlisle north of the river feels like a few different areas put together, it's hard to get a sense of where Stanwix ends and other areas begin. In particular the area in the north-east of the Stanwix Urban Ward (Raisbeck CI) where three seperate wards also meet, could do with some improvement. I think that area (which I believe consists of new-build houses) should all be under a single ward (probably Belah if the boundries aren't radically changed in the review). The western boundry of Stanwix Urban also makes sense - Austin Friars definitely marks a shift out of Carlisle - although I am curious why the border cuts inwards on Eden Street to cover the North Carlisle Medical Practice before going back out again. The eastern border also works, except I would also include Tarraby in Stanwix Urban - when walking in the area it feels closer to the houses at the end of Brampton Road as opposed to Houghton.

Attached Documents:

None attached