I have already shared my views about the proposed boundary between Acomb West and Holgate and Acomb East. Here are my views about some wider aspects of the proposed boundary changes of these and adjoining wards.

It is good to see the heart of Acomb in Front Street being in wards with Acomb's name in it.

There isn't a clear Holgate-Acomb divide, so it makes sense to have a Holgate & Acomb East ward.

The Langley Gate development makes sense in Acomb West, as it is an extension of Acomb.

Woodthorpe and Foxwood make a lot of sense together, with similar access to town, and common community facilities.

The railway line is a good identifiable boundary, particularly in Dringhouses.

I support the formation of a new Leeman Road as a good reflection of a community that is relatively isolated from the surrounding areas. It also takes in the whole of the new York Central development while keeping the older Leeman Road identity.
